

Absolutely not! As a former flight attendant myself, the craft needs order and all too often cell phone users are lost in their own conversation much less concerned about how safely things are stowed and the environment around them.

As a frequent traveler, airports are riddled with terribly rude cell phone users and we don't also need to hear the continuation of the conversation. I fear also there will be a rage factor involved and escalation of anger aboard even the shortest flight.

This should have never been released that it "might" be safe in the first place.